Archery Hunting Overview

Michigan State University is a 501(c) 3 Educational Institution and operates MSU W.K. Kellogg Experimental Forest. The priority of Kellogg Forest is research, outreach, and education. The property is owned by MSU, but open to the public during posted hours to increase recreational opportunities for the surrounding community.

Archery hunting is a popular and important recreational activity at Kellogg Forest. Hunters play a significant role in deer management and data collection associated with fluctuations in population size and health to mitigation of browse damage of active research. Kellogg Forest offers one of the most unique hunting experiences in southwest Michigan with 157 different species of trees growing in various cover types on 720 acres.

The hunting program helps MSU by improving the amount and quality of data collected. It will also enable MSU Staff to keep hunters informed about upcoming research, management, or educational events which have priority over other activities. Most importantly, monitoring who accesses the property allows MSU to provide the safest experience possible for all hunters, visitors, and staff.

Hunters must apply for a Kellogg Forest Archery Hunting Permit each season. Hunters may apply for the annual permit as an individual or a hunting group (up to 3 people).

Hunters will be provided packets which will include the annual permit, parking pass, observation sheets, maps, previous season newsletter, and other important information. Hunters are required to complete observation sheets while hunting as part of the hunting program at Kellogg Forest. The observation sheets must be delivered to the Kellogg Forest Manager at the end of the season. Photos of your harvest are encouraged and will be included in the annual newsletter!

Kellogg Forest hunters will be required to comply with all Michigan DNR rules and requirements, including obtaining and displaying a license and submitting any samples for collection.

Data collected may be shared with Michigan Department of Natural Resources, other educational institutions and state and federal partners to help promote important wildlife management and research.

Please refer to the Archery Hunting Permit Application Process for additional information regarding important dates, permit fees and related terms and conditions.
